The banks have nothing new to tell—plenty of money and little wanted is the report. Exchange was in good supply, at former rates; buying New York and New England dedemand at ½ discount; New England sight, 4, selling at par.; New Orleans ¼ discount buying, ¼ premium selling. The New York Times, of Tuesday, reports: "The following were the rates of exchange on New York at the under-mentioned cities to-day: Savanthe under-mentioned cities to-day: Sa nah, buying, 3-16 offered; selling, par; Cinnah, buying, 3-16 offered; selling, par; Cincinnati, par, buying; 1-10 premium, selling; Charleston, scarce: ¼ discount to par; New Orleans, commercial, 5-16; bank, ¼, and Chicago, par." Gold was steady in New York, quoting 106½ at noon; brokers here offering 105½ 6105½, with nothing doing. The New York Herold, of Tuesday, reported: "Gold hangs fire in spite of the better state of political matters at home, and sold to-day at 105½ 6106½, with the latter as the final price Bills are less inclined to sell, as Charleston Steady. 1621 12½ 8 12½ price. Bills are less inclined to sell, as they are carrying their load at the easier rates of 4 to 3 per cent., and still have hopes of a bellicose break-out in Europe during the early spring. The cotton market yesterday was quiet, sales not reaching 2000 bales, but telegrams were steady and the week's receipts at the ports show a considerable decline, 109,580 bales against 149,416 at the same time last year. Three weeks are total receipts at the ports.

Three weeks ago the total receipts at the port were 133,513 bales more than the year before at the same time; last week 101,-974 bales more, this week only 62,137 bales more. These decreasing figures made holdyear before at the same time; last week 101, 974 bales more, this week only 62,137 bales more. These decreasing figures made holders strong, and with steady telegrams and a good demand, the offerings were light and the market closed firm with an upward tendency. Bright cottons were relatively scarce. The New York Bulletin, of Tuesday, reported: "For spots the demand has been to some extent fro n all sources, but without much animation, and buyers inclined to move with the previous caution. On the part of holders, however, there appears to be a considerable amount of confidence displayed, the offering proving quite moderate, both in quantity and assortment, and only a basis of full rates. For future delivery the tone has been somewhat irregular, but with the undertone seemingly quite firm, and the final turn favorable to the selling interest. Early in the been somewhat irregular, but with the undertone seemingly quite firm, and the final turn favorable to the selling interest. Early in the day, under the foreign accounts, the tone was downward, and rates lost along the entire line, but afterward a reaction set in, which line, but afterward by an improvement in the tenor of private advices from Liverpool. There did not appear to be much of a decided basis for the change, but it was said that private information indicating small receipts was at hand, and with the stronger belief in cotton now current among a large proportion of the trade, a quick response to anything of a stimulating character was natural."

A correspondent of the St. Louis Republi-can says this of the condition of the river at and below St. Louis: "In talking with some of the oldest inhabitants they say this blockade of the ice is the heaviest they ever remember. The river being very low when the ice first stopped running, and the very extreme cold freezing weather since, it has become solid to the bottom in many places, and it will take a heavy rise of water to move it. Every one in this section of the country is wishing for the opening of navigation, being almost cut off from any freight communica-tion, and will be glad to hear the familiar sound of the Elliott's whistle once more." The Snow, the Ladies and the Boots. Now we have got our foot in it. The fol-lowing, addressed to this chronicler, explains the story about young ladies wearing boots during the big snow: MEMPHIS, TENN., January 23, 1877. MR. RIVER EDITOR-I saw your slur on the young ladies of the suburbs, about wearing their brothers' boots, and as I wore my husband's boots on that occasion, and as am somewhat young looking, I take the slur as intended for me. I don't care a fig about it, only I want to explain the circumstances. I wanted to go shopping, and my husband objected, and went so far as to hide my shoes. He was asleep, and I didn't want to wake him up, and I got even with him by wearing his bests. The only trouble I experienced his boots. The only trouble I experienced was, they were too small at the tops, and had to split them down a little.
